

[ABSTRACTS]

[ABSTRACT]

A method of winding a coil that is adaptive for reducing a power loss and a transformer having a coil wound using the same.

In the method, a coil winding part with no protrusion member is provided at a bobbin so as to exclude an interference caused by the protrusion member from a path wound with the coil. The coil is continuously wound from one side of the coil winding part until other side thereof.

[REPRESENTATIVE DRAWING]

Fig. 6